DO NOT USE ROCK SALT

Spring is approaching but it is still winter and we can still be covered in ice and snow.

Do not use rock salt to de-ice sidewalks and driveways.

Rock salt can soften and eat away at the concrete causing damage.

Concrete-safe de-icer can be purchased at a variety of stores.

A COMMUNITY THAT WORKS

When you read about the Village of Los Lunas you may find the phrase A Community That Works. You might be curious about that tagline.

Here's information on how that tagline came to be.

Los Lunas is a friendly, pro-development community located 20 minutes south of downtown Albuquerque, 15 minutes from the International Sunport and easily accessible off the I-25 interstate that runs north and south.

Over the past 40 years, Los Lunas' population increase has made the community one of the fastest growing in New Mexico. This is due to the ease of doing business by offering competitive incentives and speed-to-market capability for both commercial and residential projects.

Some of the largest employers are Los Lunas Meta (Facebook) Data Center campus, Walmart Distribution Center, Wall Colmonoy, Niagara Bottling, Accurate Machine & Tool, Party Outlaw, and Fresenius Medical Care distribution. There are also many other businesses including various industries and national retailers.

The University of New Mexico Workforce Training Center opened its doors in January 2022. Located close to three industrial parks and a short distance from I-25, this unique 19,000 SF facility accommodates classrooms, computer labs, a vocational lab, Small Business Development (SBDC) Office, and tutoring areas.

The facility offers classes and training focused on manufacturing and industry, as well as "soft" skills needed in the workforce.

Students train to become New Mexico employees with the specific skills they need to get the job done quickly, safely, and efficiently.

Los Lunas might look like a small community but with over 2,000 acres of available commercial and industrial land across three business parks with direct access to two major interstates as well as rail, there are big possibilities in the Village of Los Lunas, A Community That Works.

SOLAR USED IN VILLAGE

The Village of Los Lunas Public Works Department has completed its third solar facility installation.

The Fleet Maintenance Building was the first. Then the Public Works Building and now the Streets Building is generating electricity.

The benefits of solar panels have been validated for years, especially in New Mexico, says Village Public Works Director Michael Jaramillo.

Within five months of solar operation at the Streets Building, 6.6 MWh was produced; CO2 was reduced by 4.7 tons; and 78 trees were planted.

The largest solar energy-producing system at Water Well #7 and Water Sewer Administration building will be in production shortly.

The Village and its dedicated team have committed to the environment, and enjoy the electrical savings each month.

A BIT OF LOS LUNAS HISTORY

“A Cultural & Economic History of Los Lunas” was written by Los Lunas Library and Museum Director Cynthia Shetter and can be found on the Village’s website loslunasnm.gov. This newsletter is running excerpts from Shetter’s writing.

Several full service gas stations appeared along the main street in Los Lunas, including one that Climaco Aguirre owned located next to the courthouse on Main and Luna Streets. Climaco was authorized to issue automobile licenses, and in his capacity as the county clerk he was able to issue marriage licenses - sometimes from the service station – and as the superintendent of Valencia County Schools, he was actively involved in the County’s educational programs. Climaco and the other residents of Los Lunas witnessed the migration of hundreds of thousands of people in search of a better life as they passed through. Today, only one of the era’s service stations remains on Main Street in Los Lunas on the northwest corner of the intersection of Highway 6 and Highway 314 as a testament to the glory age of the Mother Road.

On October 29, 1929, Black Tuesday hit the Wall Street Stock Exchange wiping out thousands of investors and launching America into The Great Depression. This was immediately followed by dust bowl conditions that lasted over a decade and propelled people to migrate West seeking reprieve from conditions and employment. Combined, these events placed Los Lunas in a position to become an integral stopping point on the road west... Route 66. John Steinbeck described Route 66 in his 1939 iconic novel, The Grapes of Wrath as...

“...the path of a people in flight, refugees from dust and shrinking land, from thunder of tractors and shrinking ownership, from the desert’s slow northward invasion, from the twisting winds that howl up out of Texas, from floods that bring no richness to the land and steal what little richness is there. From all of these the people are in flight, and they come into [Route] 66 from tributary side roads, from the wagon tracks and the rutted country roads. [Route] 66 is the mother road, the road of flight.”

“...there’s an end to Texas. Tucumcari and Santa Rosa and into the New Mexican mountains to Albuquerque, where the road comes down from Santa Fe. Then down the gorged Rio Grande to Los Lunas and west again on 66 to Gallup, and then there’s the border of New Mexico.”

The 1930’s heralded the introduction of modern conveniences to the residents of Los Lunas. Electricity and natural gas arrived in the area and in 1939, the water works system and water tower were completed utilizing funds raised by a bond issue vote.
